A Roustabout plays an important support role in offshore and onshore oil and gas operations. The main responsibility is to assist the drilling crew and ensure that daily rig activities run smoothly and safely. A Roustabout performs general labor tasks such as cleaning, maintenance, and handling equipment. They help move materials, load and unload supply boats, and ensure all tools are properly stored and ready for use. Roustabouts regularly clean the deck, walkways, drilling area, and machinery to maintain a safe working environment. They assist with assembling and dismantling equipment, tightening bolts, connecting hoses, lifting pipes, and supporting drill floor crews when required. They also help in preparing the rig for operations by checking tools, inspecting equipment, and reporting any damages or safety hazards to supervisors. In addition, Roustabouts support crane operations by attaching slings, guiding loads, and ensuring safe lifting practices. They may help pump fluids, mix chemicals, and transport materials across the rig. Following all safety procedures, attending toolbox meetings, and wearing proper PPE is an essential part of the role. A Roustabout must be physically fit, hardworking, and able to work long hours in harsh offshore conditions. Their contribution is crucial for smooth drilling operations, workplace safety, and efficient rig performance.
